

Tafts Nomination Is Now Assured

State Convention Leaders At Late Hour This Afternoon-All Contests Decided In Favor of President

SENATOR ROOT MADE PERMANENT CHAIRMAN OF THE CONVENTION BY UNANIMOUS VOTE THIS AFTERNOON—CREDENTIAL COMMITTEE IS SUSPENDED.

Taft Men Are Jubilant

Convention May Continue Over Until Early Sunday Morning—Nominations Will Probably Be Made This Evening—Platform Committee Ready to Report.

Chicago, June 22, 3:45.—There is now no question relative to the nomination of William Howard Taft for President by the Republican national convention.

His majority is clean cut and well defined and every disputed delegation that has been contested by the Roosevelt faction has been awarded to him, not only by vote of the national republican committee, but also by the credential committee of the convention and by vote of the convention itself.

Senator Root has been elected permanent chairman and the working organization of the convention is in the hands of the Taft leaders. The platform committee made their report late this afternoon and it is expected that the nominating speeches will be made this evening. The names of Taft, La Follette and Cummings are certain to be placed in nomination and the succeeding speeches will take some time to deliver.

Whether Roosevelt's name will be presented or not is a question. The former President has stated he would not abide by the decisions of the convention and refused to recognize their authority urging his delegates not to vote. This may preclude his name being presented.

Latest indications are that the convention will not close until early Sunday morning.

Chicago, Ill., June 22.—It was the hope of party leaders on the fifth day of the republican national convention opened, to complete the work late tonight. The leaders were inclined to think without wishing to be arbitrary that all the necessary work of the convention would be made by that time. According to this program there will be a morning, afternoon and night session of the convention with the nomination of president and vice presidential candidates as the climax of the final session.

That if events force the convention over until Monday it was intimated that there would be at least two days of next week before the convention conclusion had been reached. Officers on both sides were influenced in their plans on one hand by anxious delegates to get home, and on the other by a desire to allow ample time for the discussion of all issues before the nomination is taken.

Withhold Colonel's Name?

It was strongly indicated that the colonel's name would not be presented to the convention at all except without his consent. He has given instructions to his leaders that his name is to be withheld. It was pointed out, however, that Colonel Roosevelt's expression in this regard might not control those delegates from states where that Roosevelt instructions were given. With Colonel Roosevelt out of the fight in this convention and President Taft's renomination apparently a foregone conclusion, chief interest is in the nomination of vice presidential candidates.

The names of Vice President Sherman, Governor Bradley of Missouri, Senator Cummings of Iowa, Senator Borah of Idaho, and Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler of New York and John Wainwright of Philadelphia are most frequently mentioned in this connection. Leaders chose to avoid discussion of the vice presidential question until they have decided on the nominee for the presidential candidate.

Next to the vice presidential question, the subject of rules to be presented to the convention aroused chief interest among the politicians. It was apparent in this progressive wing of the party that they would launch a bitter attack upon the rules which might take dimensions of a general fight between the Taft and Roosevelt contingents.

Hope for Conclusion.

Real anxiety to conclude the convention which already has set a record for delay, was set against such action, and there were signs that extended debate would meet with strenuous opposition by the delegates.

It was a weary collection of delegates that made their way to the Coliseum for the first session of today's convention. Many of the delegates who were prepared to leave Chicago or have departed during the night were represented by their alternates and scores of others plan to make this evening. The names of Taft, La Follette and Cummings are certain to be placed in nomination and the succeeding speeches will take some time to deliver.

out "Mr. Root, call to order. It is 10:30." At 10:30 Senator Root dropped his gavel. "The floor was in confusion and the delegates were hurrying about seeking for their seats. 'Clear the aisles,' was the order given to the sergeant at arms.

When the confusion had subsided Chairman Root introduced John Wainwright of New York, and he gave the opening prayer.

After Reverend Hill had concluded the prayer some one in the gallery called out "Toot, Toot, Toot," and there was much laughter.

The report of the credential committee on the Mississippi delegates at large resulted in the seating of Taft delegates and it was shouted from the gallery the "Ayes have it." The good nature of yesterday afternoon was evident. The Roosevelt delegates presented a minority report but it was decided by a viva voce vote.

And a chorus of "Toot, Toot, Toots," and calls from the gallery, the report of the contests in Mississippi was read and declared the Roosevelt contest a "paper case." There was no minority report and the crowd in the gallery shouted wildly as Senator Root announced the seating of Taft delegates.

The same procedure in the two delegates in the 5th, 6th and 7th Mississippi districts and as the result of each district was announced there was a chorus of whistles and calls the "Ayes have it." Likewise was the action in the North Carolina, Oklahoma and Washington caucuses. When the laughter had subsided Senator Root made the statement, "The justification is that we have some hope of starting home on Sunday." This sentiment seemed to appeal to the delegates and was met with cheers.

As time for intermission was well over an hour and a half the delegates grew anxious and it seemed likely that an adjournment would not come until eight a. m. Sunday morning.

At one P. M. after more than an hour the convention still was waiting with no sign of resumption.

The eighth district Texas Taft delegates at large placed on the temporary roll of the convention by the credential committee by a vote of 27 to 15.

The twenty-two delegates from the contested Texas districts were seated in a single decision without argument by the credential committee. No roll call was demanded. This completed the seating of the contested delegates.

As the result of the Washington contest was concluded, "Merrily we roll along," was added to the vocal program and the crowd in the gallery kept busy tooting after which there was full in the proceedings.

Chairman Roosevelt appeared on the floor in the Pennsylvania delegation, where the delegates made a great fuss over him by putting him on the back and there was a general evidence of the wave of good humor which swept over the convention yesterday afternoon.

The Texas delegation was next visited by Chairman Roosevelt and there one big delegate lifted him in his arms while the convention cheered. "Merrily we roll along," was then struck up and the Roosevelt delegates from California joined in shouting "We want Teddy," and then followed with "We'll have Teddy."

The Ohio delegation a large rolling pin was raised and invoked a gale of laughter among Taft adherents.

While the leaders sat idly on the platform and the delegates roamed up and down the platform, a Pennsylvania delegate with an imbugha and a megaphone began shouting:

"Order of ceremonies."
"Victory of the Republican Party."
"Coroner Jim Watson."
"Underwriter Eliza Root."
"Fall breaker Murray Crane."
"Helen, Penrose, Big Steve, Red Smoot, Theodore, Burton, J. Barnes."
At 12:35 Senator Root called to order and gave the report of the credential committee on the fifth Virginia district seating Taft delegates.

He smiled broadly and he advanced while shouts and "toot toot" of the whistle in the gallery, he asked consent to place on the roll the delegates against whom the contests had been dismissed by an unanimous vote of the national committee.

This leaves only the Texas cases, to be decided.

The convention then settled down to another wait.

The next order of business was the naming of the permanent organization and this is quickly accomplished when the report of the committee on permanent organization presented its report naming the temporary officers as the permanent officers of the convention.

The statement was met with shouts of approval from all parts of the hall and shouts and cheers resounded with calls of approval and disapproval from delegates.

"The motion was put and carried and when Senator Root, the permanent chairman, stepped to the front of the platform he was greeted with enthusiasm which lasted for several minutes. Aiding down only to be renewed by cheers by the delegates and galleries who continued to cheer long after he had finished.

He then introduced Henry J. Allen of Kansas, a Roosevelt leader, who stepped to the front of the platform and said:

"I desire to state that the majority of the Roosevelt delegates will not abide by the decisions of this convention."

Governor Johnson of California, one of Roosevelt's most ardent patriots then left the hall and stated he would not sit in the convention during the nomination for president or be bound by the action of the convention in any way.

The name of Samuel MacCall of Massachusetts, as candidate for vice president during the long intermission was received with interest. It was not known whether or not his name actually would be presented to the convention.

PROMISE PLATFORM SHORT AND CONCISE

DOCUMENT WILL BE BRIEF AND INCISIVE, "WITH TEETH IN IT," SAYS FRAMERS.

PROGRESSIVE KEYNOTE

Will Probably Be Sounded at Convention Next Week, Bryan Having Started Fight for Progressive Chairman.

Baltimore, Md., June 22.—The democratic national platform builders promised to present to the convention next week a document short and incisive and the number of teeth in it as one of the builders said today will depend on the outcome of the struggle between the conservative wing of the party and the progressive.

On most of the minor points however, the delegates seemed to agree. Some of them the differences is likely to arise in the committee of resolution when it considers the platform next week, and it will be more a question of language rather than of contents.

William Jennings Bryan begins his fight to have the keynote of the convention sounded by a progressive chairman. Under any circumstances he is expected to play an important part in the construction of the resolution.

In view of the present situation and the hints that leaders on the ticket propose to support the progressive democrats there is little doubt but that whatever complexion the Baltimore convention takes its platform will make sweeping concessions to the radical element in the party.

Senator O'Gorman of New York, who probably will represent New York on the resolution committee says it is the consensus of opinion that the tariff should be a dominant issue, and that a fight for a vigorous tariff should be the committee's first care.

The next plank in order of importance will relate to business monopoly. Leaders of the committee assert that there will be no reference in the platform to the initiative, referendum and recall since these matters are distinctly state issues. The progressives are planning to advocate a strong plank against the so-called "money trust."

Other planks of the convention will be as follows: Declaring for an increase in the navy, probably the construction of two battleships a year. Permitting the postal employees to organize. Improvement of rivers and harbors. Favoring national health bureau.

There is talk today of a plank declaring in strong terms against the third presidential term. If Colonel Roosevelt is nominated to run again it is said a plank is certain to find its way into the platform.

The proposed constitutional amendment favoring a six year term for the president with no reelection also is receiving favorable attention.

Murphy Arrives.

Headquarters of the New York delegation at the Emerson became a center of interest last night when Charles P. Murphy, leader of Tammany hall arrived from New York with several prominent New York politicians. As the controllers of ninety convention votes unimpaired by instructions or pledges the New York leaders occupy a position of importance.

Judge Parker is expected here tomorrow. Senator O'Gorman, of New York, who arrived before the Tammany delegation said: "I am for many of Gagner for president."

To Boom Underwood.

Birmingham, Ala., June 22.—During the next twenty-four hours several special trains will pull out of Birmingham filled to capacity with friends and supporters of Oscar W. Underwood, who are going to Baltimore to boom the Alabama congressman for the democratic presidential nomination. Stops will be made en route to pick up Underwood delegates and supporters in Georgia and other states.

Repiles to Bryan.

New Haven, Conn., June 22.—Gov. Baldwin in a reply to Bryan's request that he make strenuous opposition to Parker for chairman of convention writes that he does not think that to do so would promote harmony at the Baltimore convention.

One conference followed another between the rival camps in talking over the plans of battle on the national committee.

It was understood from the friends of Judge Parker that he had no intention of withdrawing as a candidate for the temporary chairman of the convention.

To Wait in Washington.

Washington, June 22.—Speaker Clark will remain in Washington during the Baltimore convention. He will learn of the happenings on the regular telegraph wires to the capitol and will keep headquarters in the speaker's office.

MUCH GOSSIP AS TO A VICE PRESIDENT BY THE DELEGATES

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, June 22.—The vice-presidential nomination is being given a great deal more consideration by the rank and file of delegates than by the party leaders in the Taft faction and as a result there were half a dozen rumors started without anyone of them making much headway. There was talk of Senator Kenyon of Iowa, a renomination for Sherman, gossip about the strength of Gov. Lindley of Missouri, John Wainwright of Pennsylvania, Senator Borah of Idaho and Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler of New York. The more prominent of the rumors discouraged all gossip, counseling avoidance of the subject until the renomination of President Taft had been decided.

President Taft is said not to have asked for the nomination of anyone of the men mentioned and is said to be following the advice of those looking after his interests in the convention in not committing himself on the subject at all. It is known that he would prefer to see nominated some man known as a progressive, but will not insist upon picking his running mate.

Probably the name of Gov. Hadley is on the lips of more delegates than that of any other man, due to the magnificent demonstration for him when he opened the fight on Tuesday for the Roosevelt cause, but Hadley himself said he would not be nominated with his consent.

"What if nominated over your protest?" he was asked.

"I cannot answer that," he replied.

Mr. Sherman's name may be presented by the fifteen Roosevelt men on the New York delegation. Practically all of them are known to be friendly to the vice-president and if they present his name, it is believed that nearly all of the New York delegates would vote for him. There was a report in circulation that Mr. Sherman had said he might seek the governorship nomination in New York and that he would prefer this to nomination for vice-president. "This report could not be confirmed, but it started gossip that the New Yorkers represented in the connection were likely to support James W. Wadsworth, Jr., for the governorship nomination.

Senator Kenyon is the manager of the Cummins campaign but has always been friendly to President Taft, having served under him as assistant to Attorney-General Wickersham. Word came from Senator Cummins that he would not permit his name to be considered for the vice-presidency and this started the Kenyon talk.

Many of the leaders believe that the nominees will be picked from the men who may address the convention, probably today, in putting presidential candidates in nomination. There will be little time for conference on the subject and it appears likely that no one will loom up strongly for the place until after a presidential nomination is made.

The vice presidential sentiment had not been crystallized this morning on any one aspect. It is generally conceded however, that New York, seventy-five of whose delegates have supported Taft in the convention, was entitled to distinction in naming the candidate.

Though Vice President Sherman's chances looked large there was a general feeling among the New York delegates that another nominee could be named who would develop more strength in the West. "Sherman or some man west of the Mississippi" was as definite an answer as any one informed in regard to the situation could give.

COMMITTEE MEMBERS MUCH EXERCISED BY REPORTS CIRCULATED

Chicago, June 22.—Charging that Roosevelt members of the credential committee who signed the statement stating that the workers of the committee were "Willful liars" and "Gutter Workers," were made by Chairman Dwyer, Judge Robert E. Morrison and other Taft members of the credential committee at the opening of today's session.

The Roosevelt statement was circulated last night by R. R. McCormick of Chicago, after the signature of fifteen men had been secured charging that there had been a coalition between the national committee men and contested delegates so that the committee were prepared in advance in line with a definite understanding.

"Any man who charges that statement is a liar," said Robert E. Morrison of Arizona, in a "Willful Lie." "I wrote that report myself after the fact who signed that statement are going back on it," said R. T. Hargrave of Minnesota, "but not one of us who signed it but has the highest respect for the members of the committee."

Mr. McCormick when questioned by Mr. Hargrave, admitted that he had a report of the Roosevelt members. He said most of the Illinois delegation had seen it and that most of the Roosevelt men on the credential committee had signed it.

Samuel H. Cady of Wisconsin, who has been charged with misrepresenting the progressive element of the Wisconsin delegates, said "We believe in getting progressive legislation but propose to do it legally." "Wisconsin is not the most progressive state in the union. I believe in progressive law, not in anarchy."

Mr. Cady declared that the Roosevelt men had impugned his honesty and questioned his judgment, because he did not vote for Roosevelt delegates in the third Indiana district. "In my judgment, there was nothing but anarchy there."

ROOSEVELT PLANS FORMING AN ENTIRELY NEW PARTY WITH HIMSELF AS LEADER

MAKES FORMAL STATEMENT SEVERING HIS RELATIONS WITH THE REPUBLICAN NATIONAL ORGANIZATION.

HIS LAST OFFICIAL ACT

Disgruntled and Discredited Political Leader Would Now Become the Moses of a New Political Organization.

Chicago, Ill., June 22.—Theodore Roosevelt severed his relations with the republican national convention today in a formal statement.

Having his withdrawal from the republican national organization, the former president who sought to rule or run the party that has honored him twice with the presidency, upon the decision of the convention to seat the delegates declared fraudulently elected, the strenuous Colonel from Oyster Bay makes formal plans for a third party.

It was the pitiful bluster of a defeated candidate, of a man who is deserted, even by the "seven little governors" who called forth his campaign on the verge of the action of the national convention of the republican party, in declaring his political oblivion sentence.

Roosevelt had been elected with his leaders during the early morning hours. The "Mentoring" rooms, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, the scene of his triumph, was deserted and in his own suite of apartments the Colonel laid down his ultimatum to his delegates.

Failure to obtain sufficient members

Theodore Roosevelt, the next president of the United States.

These were circulated by Major H. McDowell of Massachusetts, head of Bay State Roosevelt league. They are to be signed and returned to the Chicago headquarters of the Roosevelt league.

"Does this mean the formation of a new political party?" He was asked. "I would not make that direct statement," said Major McDowell. "It means I want to see the people nominate their choice for President."

"Party loyalty has kept the various delegations from following the impetuous lead of Roosevelt and many of the heads of the delegations who have worked hardest for his nomination by hook or crook have served notice upon him that they remain with the party. Before going to the convention Governor Hadley had a long conference with Colonel Roosevelt.

"I shall remain in the convention but whether or not I shall join with any party is the question," said Governor Hadley.

Colonel Roosevelt gave little heed today to the proceedings of the convention banding his efforts chiefly to the formation of a temporary organization of the new party. He may remain in Chicago a day or two after the departure of the republican convention, it was said.

Mr. Roosevelt's name will not be presented by his friends in this convention as now constituted, was the declaration of Orin H. Mellars of the Roosevelt forces early today. "The nomination speech of Wm. Proctorant which had been intended to be delivered in presenting Mr. Roosevelt's name will not be made."

"The Roosevelt forces will remain in the convention but as long as talented delegates remain, and there seem to be every prospect that they will re-

of the delegates to organize an even respectable bolt from the big convention, failure to force his issues through the various committees, or by the lynx-eyed Taft chairman of the convention, Roosevelt admits himself a defeated candidate.

True he has held the steps for the preliminary organization of a third party. He has secured a following among many of his most radical followers, but he has failed to even come within a decent reaching distance of the presidential nomination or even of controlling the convention as to whom it should name.

His triumphant entrance into Chicago a week ago has fizzled out and he will leave a disheartened bitter man. He has even failed in effectually disrupting the party that has honored him and has really hurt himself and his followers who have blindly followed him.

Roosevelt has severed his relations with the republican national convention in a formal statement. "Since the convention has seen fit to disregard his protest of fraud in seating certain contested delegates he can not recognize it as the power of the party he would follow."

He urges his delegates to refrain from voting in the convention but he cannot free them from voting for him if they do so without his consent. "In other words he asks the men elected and pledged to him to vote for the presidential nominee, but cannot help it if they decide to vote for him after all."

It is his last attempt at securing sympathy from the convention and one which fell upon deaf ears. It is not believed the third party will see its birth at the present time although it is possible that it may come later.

This morning hundreds of pledges were circulated throughout the hotels and public lobbies asking for signatures to a statement which read as follows: "We denounce the fraud enacted by the national republican committee in the present republican convention and dedicate ourselves to the progressive principles as laid down by man, we will not participate in the nomination.

Mr. Mellars declared that Mr. Roosevelt's friends had insisted on the third party and that at the close of this convention they would remain in Chicago with Mr. Roosevelt with the purpose in view of conferring on new party plans. Mr. Mellars expressed the belief that the convention would be planned to be called probably within six weeks.

It was also stated this morning that there was a possibility of an independent party with Bryan and Roosevelt as the standard bearers, Mr. Roosevelt the candidate for vice president.

He replied this "Does the sun how to the moon?" Mellars added however that there was no reason why an honest republican and an honest democrat could not unite on the platform of progressiveness.

The Roosevelt "Steam Roller" delegates and their alternates who were excluded from the convention met Col. Roosevelt in a body.

The Colonel had planned for a reception in forming new party plans but the crowd in the corridors became so great that it was impossible for him to carry out his first intention to meet them in state delegations and they were marshaled into the committee room of the Roosevelt forces at one time.

As Colonel Roosevelt passed through the line to the committee room a great crowd had congregated to catch a glimpse of the Colonel. He waved his hand in response.

PLAYGROUNDS OPENED BY WISCONSIN CITIES

MADISON AND LA CROSSE BEGIN
SEASON WITH DIRECTORS
IN FULL CHARGE.

PLAN ATHLETIC MEETS

Base Ball Leagues Organized—Free
Instruction in Gymnastics
Given—Play for Girls.

Madison and La Crosse each opened three public playgrounds this week after being closed during the winter months. In La Crosse the playground work will be carried on a larger scale than ever before.

According to the La Crosse Tribune Park Superintendent Porter has been planning for several months to provide the proper environment for the children of La Crosse and is satisfied that he has solved the problem. Under the plan which will be in use this year each of the three playgrounds will have a director.

The playgrounds will be opened to the children from 2 o'clock afternoon until 5:30 and from 7 to 9 o'clock in the evening. A director will be in charge of the grounds during these hours.

Indoor baseball leagues will be organized at the south side grounds and interground meets will be held on Saturdays. Volley ball, baseball and calisthenics will play a prominent part in the daily program, and other minor games will be introduced. Opening exercises will take place each morning, the flag will be raised and patriotic songs will close the exercises.

The playgrounds will open under the direction of Fred Dickens. Mr. Dickens has completed a course in the Springfield, Mass., training school, where he made a specialty of athletics and child training.

Ralph Bradish, a former high school boy who is now attending the University of Wisconsin will be in charge of the work at the West avenue playgrounds. William Bonnevillie, a normal school student, will direct the work of the Copeland playgrounds and Marcus Byers will be in charge of the work of the Adams street playgrounds.

Mrs. Clement will have charge of the girls' play and will teach singing and folk dancing. She will divide her time among the three playgrounds.

Madison's three public playgrounds were opened Monday after being closed for the past months. They are at Brithingham Park, Vilas Park and at Burr Jones Field. Mr. H. D. Mc-

Chesney of the university athletic and gymnastic faculty, will be in charge of the Brithingham park. Carl Mottler of the Turner school, Clarence Miller, Forest Stanley and T. H. Graven will have charge of the remaining fields. Free instruction in gymnastics will be given by these teachers.

Baseball leagues will be organized and a schedule of games will be played.

Bronze medals will be given for ability in track work. Silver cups will be awarded to the best baseball teams.
The school having the greatest number of children qualifying in the tests will receive a silver trophy. Diplomas and certificates will also be given the children.

Need of Play Directors.

The argument has often been advanced by people unfamiliar with playground work that it is unnecessary to have a director; "give the children a place to play and they will play all right," is the argument. This is very true in a general way, but the results of the work on directed playgrounds are so much superior to what is accomplished on grounds undirected that a return to the old way is never considered by the cities that have had experience with both. The one essential element in a play leader.
Without such a leader a playground having the most costly equipment may be a positive menace to the neighborhood. Under a good play leader the smallest space may be a children's paradise.

Qualifications of Directors.

The first problem is the selection of the man or woman with the personality and the character necessary for leading children in their play. Actual experience in cities like Pawtucket, Toledo, and Duluth, have clearly demonstrated this fact. Playground and recreation work, in order to insure the best possible results, should be in charge of trained leader directors—men and women—skilled in calisthenics, gymnastics, athletics, plays and games, folk dancing, music, child hygiene, first aid to the injured, child psychology having a knowledge of social conditions and above everything else, filled with the spirit of childhood and possessing a wide social and spiritual vision.

Ideal Playground Equipment.

An ideal playground, according to an authority on the subject, should be large enough to have two or more baseball diamonds, a couple of basketball courts, a complete set of gymnastic apparatus, including flying rings, parallel and horizontal bars, vaulting horses and benches, ladders, sliding poles, sawsaw tooters, and climbing ropes. The field should be divided into three parts—the main one for baseball and football, a smaller space for apparatus and games, and still another place for girls and young children.

As playgrounds are likely to be always parts of the general scheme of city betterment—to make better the appearance and living conditions of towns and cities—it is important that there should be comprehensive plan-

Last bulletin gave forecasts of the disturbance to cross continent June 25 to 29, warm wave 24 to 28, cool wave June 27 to July 1. One interesting feature of this will be the very cool weather during that week; another will be lack of rain in large parts of the country. Much uneasiness may be expected about that time because of a deterioration in condition of the crops, but most damage is to be feared during July and August.

A great hot wave is expected to cross continent between July 1 and 15. During that two weeks it will be generally hot and dry in large sections of the country and crop dangers will be greater than usual. Symptoms of this drought appeared in the southwest in May and June and are expected to drift eastward in July.
Excessively hot is expected in parts of the great central valleys, in parts of New England and New York, farther south in the Atlantic states and in large sections of the interior states and in the Gulf coast sections.

The most destructive drought is expected in August; not general but in such large sections that it is an advising friends of my weather work to sell no grain or cotton. It is not popular to make such forecasts but it is best to know what is coming and prepare for it. I have nothing to add in grain or cotton. These calculations are based on weather records covering about 80 years and simple arithmetical calculations. I am not a believer in weather forecasts not based on the records. Hints makes some fair forecasts but as he does not use weather records of the past, he seldom tries to locate weather events.

These bulletins are the only long range forecasts and are the only forecasts based on weather records. The people should demand of all forecasters that they say where the weather events forecasted are expected to occur. Forecasts that do not apply to sections are useless.

Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about June 30 cross Pacific slope by close of July 1, great central valleys July 2 to 4, eastern sections 5. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about June 30, great central valleys July 2, eastern sections July 4. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about July 3, great central valleys 5, eastern sections 7.

For that week dry weather will prevail while the temperatures, as a general average, will be climbing higher. This will be a severe ordeal for growing crops and fortunate will be those localities that get good showers during that week.

First week in July will bring excellent weather for harvesting in the winter wheat and for further should be field. This good weather conditions utilized in those sections included between latitudes 35 and 45. Following July 15 will not be such a pleasant harvesting weather in those mid-latitude sections.

As I have finally secured the data for more thoroughly working out a system of forecasting sunspots I will probably not make any more sunspot forecasts till through with the investigation. As many orthodox scientists believe that sunspots cause our weather changes I expect to demonstrate to them that sunspots can be correctly forecasted and their locations on the sun foretold. Then if they are correct in saying that sun-spots cause our weather changes and if I am correct in saying that sun-spots can be foretold there will be a great possibility of perfecting a system of forecasting our weather by using records of sunspots which we now have from 1759 to date.

But I have not stated that sun-spots cause our weather changes. I have only said that there is a relation between sunspots and our weather.

WEATHER.

An area of high atmospheric pressure occupies the region east of the Rockies. The weather is generally fair throughout this region, with cool weather at night. Showery weather prevailed this morning along the south Atlantic coast, and thunderstorms occurred in the Southwest, in Oklahoma and Arizona.

A barometric trough occupies the intermountain region of the West, and is attended by cloudiness. Rain continues falling on the Pacific coast.

Cleaning Glass Bottles.

A glass water bottle, when constantly used, soon becomes discolored. This may easily be cleaned by pouring a little vinegar into the bottle and adding a pinch of salt. Allow this to stand for several hours; then rinse with clear water. The bottle will be perfectly clear and bright.

Fish-Catching Cat.

William Grant of Northampton,
Mass., owns a cat that furnishes him with fresh fish. The cat enjoys sitting at the edge of her owner's lea-pond. It is said, and scooping up unwary fish with her paw. The cat has brought fresh fish to the house several times.

Bravery on the Force.

Who will say that the New York police lack bravery? Twenty-five of them have volunteered to take a course in foreign languages so as to be able to converse with New York's cosmopolitan population.—New York

Keeping Air Fresh.

A good way to keep the air of a room fresh and slightly perfumed is to place a jar in some inconspicuous place in the room and put in the jar a small block of ammonia, over which pour some ordinary cologne water.
This makes a faint, pleasant odor of which one is hardly conscious.

"My friends told me to take Peruna, and I did so. I now feel that Peru-na has saved my life. It is the best medicine on earth, and I would not be without it."

(By Associated Press.)
Lisbon, June 22.—Furious disorders have broken out on the streets in this city and three dynamite bombs have been exploded in the Rua Pedro square which killed one person and injured thirty others more or less seriously.

The cavalry was called into action
from their barracks and rode down the mob, wounding many and arresting numerous rioters who are confined under a close guard.

It is feared that the royalists will take this opportunity to start an uprising by crossing the border with armed forces which are known to be ready for an invasion when the opportunity comes.

Precautions are being taken to prevent any such occurrence, and the greatest care is being taken to arrest
all persons who have known royalist leanings.

SPORT SNAPSHOTS

by DAN MCCARTY

Our modern pugilists aren't much like the fighters of a few years back. At least in some ways. We're not thinking of their fighting ability particularly, but of their course of living before and after and between fights. In the old days when a pugilist won a battle he started out to celebrate, and his idea of celebration was plenty of 'wine, women and song.' He generally tore things up pretty well before he got through celebrating.

Times have changed. Now we read of Mike Gibbons winning a battle and then repairing to the Y. M. C. A.; of Johnny Kilbane putting his opponent out of the running, then running home to his wife and babe without even stopping to take a drink. Other pugilists are following a similar course. We can't quite get used to it, but the new order of things looks good to us just the same.

Could you in five words, give an accurate character sketch of your favorite baseball player? Some job all right, but a writer in a recent issue of the Baseball Magazine has succeeded very nicely in sketching ten of the best-known characters in the big leagues, using only five words for each. Here are the sketches: McGraw—quick, decisive, businesslike, aggressive, domineering. Dabbert—kindly, sincere, conscientious, hard-working, capable. Griffith—staunch, keen, crafty, stubborn, persevering. Cobb—impulsive, impetuous, open, fair, daring. Mack—quiet, cautious, reserved, far-seeing, sagacious. Collins—bubbly, impulsive, outspoken, dashing, spectacular. Jackson—proud, high-spirited, ambitious, hot-blooded, impetuous. Lajoie—cool, unemotional, reserved, graceful, steady. Wagner—active, awkward, comic, serious, silent. Evers—nervous, quick-witted, earnest, keen, brainy.

Marlin Delany, of the Chicago Athletic club, who is one of the coaches and trainers of the American Olympic team, is very enthusiastic over America's chances at Stockholm. "We have good men in every event," he declared recently, "and I am sure we will make points in every contest. The performance made in the Olympic trials were far better than those registered in other countries, and if the men stand the voyage well American athletes should have no fear of the team not upholding the honors won at St. Louis, Athens and London."

Hierrett, star first baseman of the Princeton college team, has signed up with the New York Americans.

POINTERS FOR THE MOTORIST REPAIRING INNER TUBES.

When a tube is punctured, the first thing to do is to find out if the puncture is on one wall of the tube or if both walls are perforated. Next, a careful examination should be made to determine that no part of the article which caused the puncture has lodged inside the tube.

"Then select a red para patch," says a recent Michelin instruction book, "considerably larger on all sides than the injury to be repaired and clean the puncture carefully on its flat or unbeveled side with emery paper. Now lay the tube on a convenient flat surface such as the dash or step, and with emery clean a space around the puncture slightly larger than the patch to be used. Coat both the cleaned surfaces with cement and after this has dried apply a second coat. In about ten minutes when the surfaces are still 'sticky' press the patch firmly in place taking care that the edges do not curl. If the patch is heavily oiled little difficulty will be experienced. Now tap the patch lightly all over its surface with some round, smooth object like the end of a tool handle. If done carefully this will exclude every particle of air and the cemented surfaces will adhere perfectly. Put a smooth flat-surfaced weight on the patch and leave the repair thus as long as practicable."

Yesterday afternoon the Janesville Cardinals were defeated by a Sharon team at that place, which in reality, was one quarter of the Janesville Trolley league team. When the Cardinals went out there they expected to meet a team somewhere near their class. The local players showed that they were no good as any of them by scoring three runs in the first inning. When the final score was given out it was 7 to 4 in favor of Sharon, but the Cardinals deserve much credit for holding such a strong team as this to such a small score. OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

"Charles L. Boyer, of Harrisburg, Pa., formerly of London, England, is devoting his life to making people smile—not people who are healthy, happy, or well-to-do, but poor people, invalids, children, and overworked mothers. Although busy all day, he gives the greatest amount of pleasure with his automobile, which was presented by the people of Harrisburg, and built expressly for the purpose of giving free rides to those who are less fortunate. It accommodates a dozen adults or twenty children. It has wide, comfortable seats, footstools for the children, folding seats at the rear so that the children cannot hang on at the risk of life and limb, a big windshield, and soft backs for the sick. It started its career as a "joy-giver," a year ago, and has covered hundreds of miles about the city, leaving behind it "hills of smiles," as Mr. Boyer himself likes to say. The automobile is only one of the many ways which he has of bringing joy and hope to those who have fared ill in life's journey. Another unique means of promoting happiness is the "Home Invalids' Union," which he organized about seven years ago and planned for invalids and shut-ins, who live in homes where they have little to give them pleasure or cheer.

"Harrisburg, his native city, is not the only place that has enjoyed Mr. Boyer's generosity. The slums of London looked upon him as a fairy God-father during his residence there,"—Christian Herald.

Mr. Boyer has discovered the secret of Christian service. He may be a man of loud profession, but the chances are that he is not, as the people, with rare possessions of any kind, are usually quiet people who profess but little.

A wealthy farmer in Walworth county, some years ago, was in the habit of going barefoot in the summer time, and one day he went to town without his foot-gear. A lady who was visiting in the place, moved with pity for the poor old man, bought him a pair of shoes, which he accepted with gratitude. Her hostess smiled; when told of the circumstance, and said: "Why, that old man could buy the shoes and never miss the money." He was long on possession, but short on profession of wealth.

Mr. Boyer was prompted to a high order of Christian service, because he had a heart which beat in sympathy with a class of humanity which had nothing to offer in return save appreciation. There was nothing unbecomingly about his efforts, because they were inspired by a spirit of unselfishness.

It is just as natural for life to seek happiness for itself as it is to breathe. The animal kingdom, unrestrained, revels in the great domain of nature in search of comfort and happiness, and the human family, possessed of the same ambition, appreciates every means at command in search of the same results.

This is right and commendable, for humanity is at its best when the heart is filled with joy, and when a song of melody cheers the wayfarer. But joy in the heart means neutral happiness, for we are so constructed that the pleasures of life, to be enjoyed, must be shared by those about us.

The man who drinks, unless he be a confirmed sot, seldom enters a social alone. He wants someone to enjoy the pleasure with him, and this is true of the man who smokes.

The drinking habit is responsible for the downfall of many young men who would never have cultivated a thirst for the love of the cup, and a large majority of the men who drink today, would cut out the habit, if the social features were eliminated. One of the best regulations, in the law adopted in some of the states which prohibits the tipping custom.

In Missouri the license in inland cities is $2,500. The saloons have neither screens or curtains, and no furniture except the bar. There is no treating and no chance to loaf. There is no drunkenness.

Society is so constituted that it is a community of friends, and where conditions are normal, a mutual desire prevails to share the pleasures of life and thus contribute to the general happiness.

The man with an automobile never thinks of going off to spend the day alone, and while his wife may be over so good company, some congenial souls must be invited to make up the party. That is why every car you see is loaded to its capacity, every time it goes out. The same is true of the launch, which contributes so much to people's pleasures.

But there are other conditions where friendship is lacking, and where through age, or infirmity, or misfortune, the victim is shut out from the ordinary pleasures which bless the average life, and unless some thoughtful, unselfish soul like Charles L. Boyer comes to the relief, they are ever deprived of these common blessings.

It doesn't require much effort on the part of any of us to bring a smile to the cheek, or cause the heart to glow with a new warmth. Just a kindly word of good cheer or a little act of kindness, is all that is needed.

The new theology, which is fast gaining recognition, dispels much of the mystery which has long prevailed, by bringing the supernatural down to the level of human comprehension, because it regards every soul as a child of God, however depraved that soul may be.

The love of a mother is said to be Divine in character. It is so pure and strong that it goes out after the wayward boy or girl, just as the shepherd of olden time went out after the lost sheep.

We say, "that is the mission of the mother," but the fact is, dawning on the Christian world that it is also the mission of humanity, and the only method of doing effective work for the Master.

The settlement work in the slums of the great cities, the child's welfare movement, the Boy Scouts, the public playground, and many other avenues of helpfulness, are coming to be recognized as a high order of Christian service, and they are so broad and liberal in character that people of every creed and no creed find a common footing.

There is so much of mystery concerning God, and the heaven which is called His dwelling place, that the average intelligent mind, wearied with speculation, attempts to solve the problem along rational lines, and so the belief is growing that heaven is where God is and that God is everywhere. That He dwells in the heart of humanity, and works through human hands to lighten the burdens, and inspire human hearts to represent Him.

This was the thought that prompted Mr. Boyer to go out into the highways and byways on missions of service which brought joy and happiness to the less fortunate, and gave them a glimpse of Divine love which was free from mystery, and easy to understand.

The parable of the wise and foolish virgins, written so long ago, was not a text of faith, and there was nothing supernatural about it. The verdict was based on the simple statement of doing or neglecting.

The passing of the centuries has in no way affected this verdict, and the same great principle applies today. The busy workshop where we toil is as much the dwelling place of the Master as any realm beyond the stars.

This thought is nicely brought out by Meredith Nicholson in the July Atlantic magazine. He takes for his text, "Should Smith go to Church?" And after answering the question to his own satisfaction, closes with the following paragraph:

"Somewhere there is a poem that relates to the experience of a certain humble priest who climbed the steeples of his church to commune more nearly with God. And, as he prayed he heard the Voice answering and asked, 'Where are thou, Lord?' and Lord replied, 'Down here among the people!'"

Wives of Great Men.
Bill Jones' wife takes in washin' and Jim Smith's wife teaches school. Ned Brown's wife takes in sewin', and supports him as a rule.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, unless cured out of the ear by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We have discovered the only safe and certain way to cure deafness, and it is called the Catarrh Cure, sold by Dr. J. C. Kennedy, & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists.

Take this Catarrh Cure for catarrh of the Eustachian tube.

Muslin Underwear:

The time has come, to pass when nine women out of ten pay as much attention to their under-clothing as they do their outerwear. In selecting our stock—for this special event—we kept this thought before us. We made the smallest mite possible procure for us garments that are made of a quality more than commensurate with the prices we ask for them.

We bought from manufacturers who have attained the height of perfection in the cut and finish of their goods—in fact we did all we possibly could to gather here just the kinds and styles of dainty, white undermuslins women want, and, as a closing argument, we want to emphasize the bigness of the savings to be made by the woman who buys her undermuslins at this store now.

BOY AND GIRL DROWN: CANOE OVERTURNED

HARRY LOGERMAN OF THIS CITY AND MISS ZONA EDWARDS ARE MISSING.

SEARCH FOR BODIES

Young People Started on Ride up River Early Last Evening—Bodies Found This Afternoon.

Rock River again took its toll of death last night when Harry Logerman of this city, and Miss Zona Edwards of Monticello, both about eighteen years of age, were drowned presumably through the overturning of their canoe, the time and place of the accident is not definitely known, and it was not suspected until this morning when the canoe, half filled with water was found about twenty feet from the riverbank on the Haskin's farm, about two miles north of the city. Warren Haskins discovered the boat at about 5:30 o'clock and wading out drew it to shore.

Harry Logerman, in company with Miss Edwards who has been visiting for a month or more at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Thomas James, 114 North Chatham street, went to the Jones boat livery early last evening, and engaged a canoe, Byron Jones, son of the proprietor, giving them the boat. Mrs. James, worried because Miss Edwards did not return up to late last night, and discovering early this morning that she was still missing, sent her son, Byron Jones, to the Jones boat livery to inquire. Byron Jones then went up the river in a launch and found his canoe at the Haskin's farm. It was half filled with water, but one paddle and a water-proof cushion still remained in it.

Shortly after 11 o'clock, Deputy Ira D. Fisher took charge of a searching party which left for the supposed scene of the drowning this morning. The east shore of the river was searched in vain at a nearly hour today for any trace of the bodies.

No one can be found who was anywhere near the young people at the time of the drowning. One party reported to Chief of Police Appleby that he had heard hollering on the river and saw a boat there sometime after nine o'clock last evening but did not take the chances to be those of distress. Judge Fifield and party who were up the river last evening, reports that they saw a canoe about 1:15 o'clock but were unable to distinguish the occupants.

How the accident occurred is, of course, a mystery. The canoe is one of the largest at the Jones livery and was spacious enough to carry six passengers. It is thought that the craft might have hit a stump in the darkness with sufficient force to overturn it, but the canoe itself showed no effect of a serious collision. Another possibility suggested is that the canoe might have been overturned by the waves from a passing launch.

Miss Edwards is the daughter of A. E. Edwards of Monticello, former postmaster at the Green county village. She has been the guest of her aunt, Mrs. James for the past month. Her parents were notified of the drowning and her father was expected to arrive this morning. Mrs. Edwards was thought, would arrive on the afternoon train.

Miss Edwards was born at Monticello, Nov. 20, 1893. She has always lived there and has a large circle of warm friends there. She was a talented musician and her sudden demise is a tragic and to a beautiful young life of unusual talent and promise.

In addition to her father and mother she leaves, four brothers, Harry, Lucius, Raymond, and Lofley, all of Monticello, and one half-brother, Wayne Edwards, who formerly lived here, but who now resides at Chicago.

Young Logerman was sixteen years old, and had always lived in this city. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Logerman, 1603 Pleasant street, and was known to be an industrious boy of exemplary habits. He had been employed for six months or more by the Hamilton and Lano bakery company where he had an enviable record for integrity and attention to business. He leaves behind his parents, two brothers, John who is also employed by the bakery company, Walter, who resides in the west, and a married sister, living in Chicago.

Girl's Body Found

The body of Miss Edwards was taken from the river shortly after noon today by a party of searchers employed by the city.

The body was brought to the surface by a young man named O'Brien. Search for the body of young Logerman was continued throughout the afternoon.

Young Man's Body Recovered

The body of Miss Edwards was found about forty rods from the place where the canoe was discovered. In about eight feet of water. About half past one o'clock this afternoon the body of young Logerman was pulled out of the water, within twenty feet of the place where the young lady's body was found. Miss Edwards' body was taken to the Kimball morgue, and the young man's remains have been placed in the Ashcraft morgue.

Heard Cries

While returning from an up-river trip in a canoe last night, Harold Dolan and Roy Howland thought they heard cries of distress from the river near what is known as "Swallow Hollow." The two young men spent half an hour in endeavoring to find when the call came from, but in the night could discover no sign of the one from whom the call came, or of a boat.

FULL HOUSE GREETS LAST NIGHT'S PLAY

Winning Brothers Company Pleases Audience at Myers Theater—Engagement Ends Monday Night.

Winning Brothers' company was arrested by a full-house at Myers theater last evening, and the attraction, "A Dutch Blockhead," proved to be one of the best plays of the present engagement. The members of the company are all actors of ability and had been carefully selected for their respective parts. Ray A. Brown as Bob Ryan, the genial Irishman, the country store manager and a friend to all in the goodly rural community, proved to be an actor and played his role with remarkably appreciation of what was demanded of him.

The Frank Wininger appeared in the role of a German farmer and exact antithesis of Ryan, and was received with applause. Mr. Wininger's genial nature is seen to better advantage in a comedy part which does not require the exhibition of sturdiness and hot-headedness, but his versatility proved him capable of his part last evening. Adelle Hurley was charming as Gill Cooper, and Evelyn De Pollart played the part of Lydia White in an engaging manner. Mary Avery as Margaret Ryan was a delightful character and E. S. Ross as Alf Schultus, Adolf Wininger as Dick Ford and W. A. Morse as Sam Wininger, were all at home in their roles. The company will close their engagement in Janesville with their performance Monday evening.

WILDER DECLARES CHINA IS NOT A TRUE REPUBLIC

Madison, Man, Consul-General at Shanghai, Tells of Actual State of Affairs.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., June 22.—"It cannot be said that there is as yet any republic in China in the sense that we use the word," said Anna L. Wilder, American consul-general at Shanghai, who is spending three weeks in Madison, his former home.
"The great mass of the people of China," he said, "have little knowledge of government and have no direct hand in affairs, so when the term republic is used in reference to China it should not be understood as meaning direct and intelligent participation in government, as is the case in our own country and with other public forms of government. It may eventually develop into some such form there. At present the affairs of the country are being directed by a sort of council of able, educated men who feel the need of putting their country more in line with the progress of the age and improving conditions as they can."

Unusual labors incident to the troubles of the recent revolution, with which he was prominently identified as the representative of one of the big Powers, have undermined Dr. Wilder's health somewhat, and he was obliged to return to this country to recuperate. From Madison he will go to Washington to confer with President Taft and the state department, and will return to the Orient in September.

D. W. Watt Tells of the War Between Adam Forepaugh's and Other Big Shows.

In his latest story of circus life this week, Mr. Watt takes up the season of '84 with the Adam Forepaugh show. The circus war between Forepaugh and the other big shows was becoming more acute each year. Forepaugh was one of the great showmen who saw that features would be an essential part of the circus life of the future and he was really the pioneer in this line by bringing out Custer's last battle.

This stirring scene was enacted in the arena of the show and took the place of the chariot races that had been prevalent, the man running against the horse and the rest of the fixed races that used to delight the patrons of the big top. Custer's last battle, his defeat and slaughter by the savage Sioux under Sitting Bull, the Medicine Man, is historical but the thrills this show gave to the spectators will be remembered by all who ever saw it.

The later day Wild West shows are merely the following up and working out more of the details of Adam Forepaugh's original idea. Today we see pageants wonderful in drill and color schemes but the old time circus with the smell of the saw dust, the banked rings of red, the flaring gasolene lights, the peanut vendors, the lemonade the funny clowns who were funny have gone for the large cities and in those places we only catch glimpses of them in small towns where a few old tin road shows still reach.

Mr. Watt has now launched into the big show business and from now on his articles will have more of the modern day twang to them. The circus life is always fascinating and to read it as told by one of the old veterans of the box office, who saw the show and appreciated its funny features from outside, will prove most interesting reading.

"The season of '84 I arrived in Philadelphia early in April. Mr. Forepaugh met me on my arrival and said to me, 'David, I have finally got a show grounds of my own. I want to drive you out and show you the finest show grounds you ever saw.'"

It was several blocks of ground on North Broad St., adjoining the Philadelphia & Reading R. R. and this was the first season of the big Hippodrome in the city and for this part of the show he had imported 22 thoroughbred English horses; also had brought over many performers from the other side.

In addition to this he gave the famous Custer's last battle. For this he had brought East 56 Indians from the far West to take the part.

In numbers of people and horses this was the largest show that Adam Forepaugh ever put on the road. When we left Philadelphia we had 701 people on the pay roll. Everybody was paid once a week. The performers and heads of the show were paid every Wednesday and the working people every Saturday.

The performers were paid immediately after the afternoon show and the working people formed in line and the work of paying them commenced at 2:00 o'clock. Every working man had a number as well as his name and as they would stop up to the wagon every man knew his number and would call his name and number. This work would usually last about two hours and there were about 425 of these men paid every Saturday.

Among the performers this season there were four acts which cost $1400 per week. Louis Rentz was a famous German barrel rider. His salary was $350 per week and all expenses for himself, his father, groom and two horses. And his salary commenced when he left Germany and lasted until he returned home. Mr. Forepaugh paying all expenses both ways.

The Sibben Family, aerial artists, were English people and brought over that winter for the first time and their salary was the same.

The Lloyd Family, father and two sons, also English people, were riders and received the same salary of $350 per week.

Leonita of an English family, rode a bicycle on a curving spiral down the center pole at lightning speed and he was another on the $350 list.

After showing Philadelphia 2 weeks, we went to Baltimore and Washington, D. C., and from there started West. One morning in a town in Pennsylvania I was riding down to the hotel with Mr. Forepaugh to breakfast when we overtook a farmer with a load of potatoes.

Mr. Forepaugh was always looking out for bargains and as potatoes were pretty high and scarce, we stopped the farmer and asked him the price of his potatoes. The farmer told him so much, which was about 10c a bushel lower than he could get them of the groceryman.

He told the farmer he would take the potatoes and give him an order on the treasury. He could go to the grounds, unload there and go to the treasury wagon and get his money. He said, "This is my treasurer in the carriage with me and as soon as he gets breakfast will be up to the grounds."

The farmer shook his head and said, "No sir, I have seen you circus fellows before. If you want to buy my 'aters, you must pay me the cash, then I will deliver them any place you want them."

"Mr. Forepaugh had but little money in his pocket and turned to me and asked me if I had any money with me and together we managed to scrape up $28.75, which the potatoes came to.

Mr. Forepaugh paid him and gave him a note to Charles Moore, a colored man who had charge of commissary and we drove down to the hotel and had breakfast. After waiting a long time at the grounds for the farmer and his load of potatoes, Mr. Forepaugh made up his mind that something was wrong.

He sent the Pinkerton detective that he always had with the show, down to the town to see if he could hear anything of the farmer and potatoes. After inquiring all along the main streets nobody knew anything about any farmer with a big load of potatoes.

I finally went back on a side street and found the farmer had sold his potatoes to a groceryman who did not know him and evidently left for home. The groceryman had no idea who he was or where he lived.

So Mr. Forepaugh never got his potatoes and any time after that when he would get smart and tried to joke, they would simply say they had seen a farmer down town with the finest load of potatoes they ever looked at and that would end all jokes.

We came on West showing Cincinnati 4 days and 2 weeks later opened in Chicago for 2 weeks. Louis Rentz on the opening day in Chicago made the greatest act of his life and made a great hit in the city. Thousands of people during the two weeks stay would come into the show and see him ride and go out, many of them coming many times simply to see the great rider.

That year we showed Waterloo, Iowa, giving two shows. At St. Paul and Minneapolis we showed three times a day, forenoon, afternoon and night and the receipts for Waterloo, St. Paul and Minneapolis were only $28.75 apiece; 3 of the biggest one-day receipts during the season.

We went on West from Minneapolis through Kansas and Nebraska taking all the larger towns and then turned South East toward winter quarters and closed the season at Morristown, Tenn., only a short distance from Philadelphia.

Mr. Forepaugh all during the season was picking up single drivers and pairs as well as always on the last day of the show he would advertise in Philadelphia and New York papers that during the season he had picked up some of the finest horses which would be on sale during the closing day of the show and frequently would sell single drivers and pairs all the way from $500 up to $1500.

The next day everything was in winter quarters at Spring Garden and new forces put to work building cages, and all kinds of wagons and harnesses for the next year, and I started back to Janesville to my winter quarters.

Dedication of Memorial Arch At Madison Last Wednesday

(By D. L. Eller.)

On Wednesday afternoon at Madison at the main entrance to the athletic field at Camp Randall, the handsome new memorial arch in commemoration of the Wisconsin soldiers who fought in the Civil War was dedicated with appropriate exercises. Over four hundred veterans of the Civil War and hundreds of their relatives and spectators witnessed the exercises which were held on the knoll near the arch, which stands at the Dayton street entrance to the grounds. Lieutenant-Colonel J. A. Watrous of Milwaukee, chairman of the commission which had charge of the erection of the memorial, presided at the ceremonies and made the presentation. Bishop Samuel Faltows of Chicago made the dedicatory address.

But Camp Randall as it now stands, and as it was fifty years ago, are vastly different. No more the old barracks and headquarters where the soldiers and officers congregated; no more the drilling grounds for the troops; in their places are the training quarters for the athletes and bleachers for the fans, and practice grounds, under running paths and practice fields have supplanted the parade grounds. No more the rattle of drums, the sharp call of orders and the rattle of arms. The drums may rattle, but it is the drums of a student rosters band, the sharp call is a team signal that sounds like a cross between the alphabet and a musical system, and the rattle of arms would be drowned in the shrill yells of thousands of student voices. But times are changed and the energy of youth is spent in more peaceful pursuits than those of the old days of the camping ground.

Ninety-one thousand men from Wisconsin were enlisted in the Union army during the Civil War, and of this number the greater share were organized into regiments at Camp Randall or joined the older regiments after being drilled there. Twenty-eight regiments of infantry and two batteries of Light Artillery were organized there. Besides these, thousands of recruits were sent out from Camp Randall to fill the vacant places in the muster rolls of regiments whose ranks had been depleted through losses in battle. The camping ground and barracks were a sort of recruits preparatory school for service afterward in the army, and an outfitting station for the regiments that went from there after being organized there.

With this story a picture of Camp Randall as it appeared in the year 1861, is printed, through the kindness of S. C. Burnham of this city, clerk of the board of education, and a member of the Fortieth Regiment, Wisconsin Infantry Volunteers. The cut was made from a drawing and lithograph of the grounds published in 1861. Many of the facts given in this story were furnished by Mr. Burnham. Mr. Burnham's regiment was quartered in the barracks at Camp Randall from May 17, 1864, until June 14, when they were sent south to Memphis.

"The arch is located at the main entrance to the grounds, in the foreground of the picture," said Mr. Burnham. In the ten barracks at the right of the main entrance were quarters for a regiment, and our company was quartered in the barracks near in the picture. Nearby were the officers' quarters, and where the flag is flying was headquarters. The picture shows a regiment on dress parade on the big drill ground. At the left is the guard-house, or "bull-pen" as we used to call it.

"The first few nights when we went into camp there the boys frolicked and had a good time, and there wasn't much sleeping done, but they soon calmed down. There were two rows of bunks in the barracks, along each side, and they had to sleep on the hard boards with only their blankets, so they didn't get much rest those first few nights.

"Our life in camp was similar to the camp-life in the army. We had reveille, fatigue drill, all the other drills, the same as they had in the field and dress parade.

"Nearly all the recruits were sent to Camp Randall, with the exception of a few regiments that were organized in some city, the batteries and cavalry and a few of the early regiments, which did not go there because the barracks had not been established. But we drew our arms and uniforms there, and from there were sent to the south. Some of the companies, after they came in were assigned to regiments which were being made up, and sent out.

"The recruits were generally drilled about a month before they were put in regiments or sent out to the older regiments. Nearly all the regiments, numbering up to twenty, and from thirty-five to fifty-two, were camped at Camp Randall. Besides these any number of men went out to fill the gaps in ranks of regiments in the field. Of the companies that went out from this city, I think there were only two that did not go to Madison. The members of the Thirtieth regiment were camped here on the Fair Grounds, at what was called Camp Treadway, and the Third Cavalry camped in Spring Brook in Camp Barstow.

Your Money's Worth In An Automobile

RECENTLY the president of one of the world's largest industrial organizations made the statement that any product manufactured or handled in the largest quantity could be delivered to the ultimate consumer at a saving of at least twenty-five per cent. And he was not talking at random. His remark was simply the result of a series of careful investigations among a number of different industries in this country and abroad.

There is no industry where this condition is so much in evidence as in the automobile business. And there is no single concern in the automobile business that has the enormous capacity and the economical method of production as that of The Willys-Overland Company.

The Overland plants are the greatest of their kind in the world. They cover over eighty acres. Millions of dollars are invested in automatic machinery and special tools. Over four thousand men are employed. Thirty thousand cars will be made this year.

Over and above this The Willys-Overland Company is controlled by one man—J. N. Willys. He directs the operation of the entire organization. He owns every share of its stock. There is none for sale. There are no bonds to be taken up. There is no hungry manipulating board of directors. Nor are there any dangerous outstanding loans staring the company in the face.

All of which brings us to the point that the cars shown in this advertisement at $900 and $1200 are only possible when turned out by a plant of our size, and our healthy operating and financial condition. You have never seen so much real car for so little real money. Take Model 60 at $1200 shown on the left. Just run over a few of the specifications and see how near this comes to the average fifteen hundred dollar car.

It is a big five-passenger car—comfortable and with lots of room. It has a powerful thirty-five horsepower motor, which can easily develop fifty to sixty miles an hour. The wheel base is one hundred and eleven inches. The transmission is of the selective type—three speeds and reverse—fitted with F & S. bearings, which are used in the most expensive cars made. Crank and gear casings are made of pure aluminum. The frame is of cold rolled pressed steel. The shifting levers are in the center of the car. The body lines are graceful and pleasing. The upholstery is of good leather hand stuffed with fine hair.

Can you duplicate this car for much less than $1500? If you want a machine of the thirty-five horsepower touring car type, would you pay $1500 when you can get this car for $1200? Do you want to literally waste three or four hundred dollars?

Model 59 T, at $900 is another striking example of how our great capacity can save you money.

This car has a 30-horsepower motor; seats five people. The wheel base is 106 inches. The front axle is a one-piece drop forged I-section fitted with F & S. bearings. The rear axle is full floating, also fitted with F & S. bearings. The pressed steel frame has a double drop. It is equipped with Bosch magneto. Tires 32x3½ inches. The big handsome body is finished in rich dark blue. Upholstery is of the best leather and genuine hair. This car is big, strong and magnificent. It is hard to figure what more anyone could possibly want in an automobile. It is complete in every detail, having all those little modern refinements that make for comfort. The price of this car is $900. Go over the market with a fine tooth comb and you will not find its equal for less than $1200.

Let us send you a comprehensive and interesting book which takes you through the Willys-Overland plants—the greatest in the world. A few minutes with this book will show you what a plant of large capacity can do in the way of economical production. When you write please ask for book 000.

A carload of these cars were received this morning including the Model 59 Roadster at $900. Call in and see them.

Bake Your Bread

Union Cookery Bags

OF COURSE, you make good bread—the best that can be made in the ordinary way, with just a pan in the oven. And the more you can make your bread, the more you are pleased with it. The things you desire in your loaves of bread are—the thin, crisp, light crust, evenly browned all over the firm, constant, yet light and porous inside of the loaf, and that quality which keeps the bread fresh the longest time after it is baked.

Now just think a minute. If the bread dries out too much in baking it becomes stale quickly. What will prevent the loaf from drying out too much in the oven? Why, Union Cookery Bags, certainly! The moisture cannot escape but is all kept in the loaf—when a Union Cookery Bag is slipped over the pan and its contents before putting into the oven.

The intense heat thrown from the inside of the loaf upon the bread, bakes the crust before the moisture has time to escape. Just as when you make French-fried potatoes. You drop the slices of raw potato quickly into the boiling grease. The surface is evenly and crisply browned all over in scarcely more than a moment. And the inside of the potato cooks thoroughly—soft and delicious without losing any of the nutriment or flavor.

NEW WATERWORKS RESERVOIR AT ROCKFORD NEARLY READY.

(Rockford, Republic). The new concrete reservoir at the water works is quickly approaching completion and Thursday morning the roof will be started. A large amount of concrete will be used for the top of the circular tank. The construction of this reservoir has been an attractive engineering feat, and work has gone ahead so steadily that it will soon be ready for service.

A new assistant for Guy C. Crano, superintendent of the Water Works, will assume his new duties on July 1. The young man has not been definitely accepted but it is expected he will come to terms with the city in the near future and will report here on July 1. The man is a graduate of the University of Illinois and specialized in engineering.

Water service as yet unmolested must be meted by Sept. 1 which is the final date set by the ordinance.

INSTRUCTION IN SWIMMING GIVEN AT CITY BATH-HOUSE.

Madison's only public bathhouse has opened its regular summer season at Williamson Park with H. D. McCordy of the university athletic faculty in charge. Classes will be held daily from 9 o'clock in the morning until 8:30 o'clock in the evening.

A schedule of classes has been arranged for boys and girls. There are regular hours of instruction for men and women bathers. Instructions will be given only to men or women for whom the hour has been especially designated.

Life saving and methods of resuscitation will be the chief lessons taught at the bathhouse this summer. These medals will be of bronze and will have the impression of a diver in the center.

WATERTOWN WANTS CONCRETE PAVEMENT

Citizens Petition That it be Put Down on Streets After Inspections in Other Cities.

The Mayor, members of the Street and Bridges committee of the Council, the Board of Public Works, and residents on streets in Watertown which are to be improved submitted a report to the Common Council at its last meeting on an inspection of concrete paved streets in Fond du Lac.

The report is of interest to all city-dwellers and is given in part here:

"Under guidance of the city engineer of Fond du Lac, Mr. J. S. McCullough, we went over the entire system of new eight and one-half miles of concrete pavement. We were informed, that five years ago the city of Fond du Lac realized the insufficiency of water bound macadam in the age of fast motor traffic and also the financial hardship on abutters on residence streets in case of a costly sheet asphalt or brick pavement, and that it therefore followed the example of Richmond, Ind., which has used this type of paving for now about fifteen years.

Toronto, Can., Allentown, Pa., Holliston, O., Mason City, Ia., Dupere and Manitowish, Wis., Hozeman, Mont., and others, by experimenting on one street with an all concrete pavement.

In the following year longitudinal cracks appeared more or less near the center of the street, some of them two inches wide; but in all other respects the pavement was so successful, as far as ease of traction, sheet asphalt like appearance and affording a good footing to horses is concerned, that the city engineers continued putting out this type of paving to such an extent, that Fond du Lac has now eight and one-half miles of such concrete pavements, several blocks of its Main street being now paved therewith.

The above mentioned cracks in the older concrete pavements have been filled with an asphalt at no additional expense to the city, there being a five year guarantee on the pavements. In their later pavements they have in an effort to overcome this one bad feature of the concrete cracking along the center line of the street, applied wire meshing reinforcement and that successfully.

The pavement is constructed, in brief, in the following manner: After proper preparation of the subsoil a rich mixture of concrete is laid in a depth of five inches, the wire mesh reinforcement then placed on top of this main core and a top coat or wearing surface of one and one-half inch thickness is then laid, expansion joints being provided for along gutters and transversely across the pavement.

We are of the opinion that a concrete pavement with a refined tar preparation, such as "Duthway" is highly recommended, this method having gained favor during the later years in Ann Arbor, Mich., and other cities. It protects the concrete against the influences of weather to an additional extent, the traffic pounding the bitumen tightly into the pores and small hair cracks of the concrete. We are given to understand that Fond du Lac intends doing this, either later on all their concrete paved streets. We believe that such pavements can be laid in this city at a cost of $1.25 per square yard, which would correspond to a cost of about $2.50 per lineal foot on each side of a street in case of a pavement thirty feet wide; or to a cost of $2.10 per lineal foot on each side of a street in case of a twenty-seven foot wide pavement; such a width of twenty-seven feet has been considered sufficient for residence streets at the last pavement in Fond du Lac."

MAN COUGHS AND BREAKS RIBS. After a frightful coughing spell a man in Neenah, Wis., felt terrible pain in his side and his doctor found two ribs had been broken. What agony Dr. King's New Discovery would have saved him. A few teaspoonfuls of a late cough, while persistent use results in permanent cure. INTERESTING BIT OF POLITICAL HISTORY

BRIEF RESUME OF THE VOTES OF
OUR TWENTY SEVEN PRESI-DENTIAL ELECTIONS.

PRESIDENTS & PARTY

Democrats Have Won But Two
Elections Since 1860—Discord
In Chicago Not Unusual Occurrence.

Just at this time there is unusual interest in the possible outcome of the coming national election. Will the democrats be successful or will the republicans again gain ascendancy despite the apparent disruption of their party organization by the exciting incidents of the past week in Chicago.

But twice since the Civil war have the democrats won an election although there are many who still hold that Tilden, the democratic nominee in 1876, should have been seated instead of his opponent Hayes. The fact however remains that the democrats have an uphill fight to win out despite the fighting in the republican ranks.

Holds have not been infrequent in the history of both political parties. In 1860 the democrats held three separate conventions, nominated Stephen A. Douglas, and J. C. Breckinridge. Douglas was the choice of two conventions that were held. In 1896 we find that the Colorado delegation left the republican convention at Chicago when they refused to adopt the silver plank in their platform and later the so-called democratic deserters.

Previous to this we have the history of Cleveland's first election and the desertion of the Maine standard by leading republicans from all parts of the country who later came back into line. In 1872 the democrats were also split on their national ticket, Horace Greely, Charles O'Connor, T. A. Hendricks, U. Grant Brown, and Charles J. Jenkins all running under the democratic name de plume.

Politics make strange bed fellows and from the earliest town meetings of our Pilgrim ancestors the average man has taken part in the right of franchise granted him. When the election of states was perfected there came a great dispute as to whether the president should be called "His Excellency, King or what." Washington settled it all by "Mr. President" and Mr. President it has remained ever since. Wisconsin has had its share of political bickering and from the present split in the ranks of the Wisconsin delegation in Chicago on the temporary chairmanship, may have more this fall. However the greatest interest now remains in the presidential problem and the possible success of the candidates who may be named. Talk of the third party brings up the question of a disruption of one or both of the two great political parties. The republican party of today is a branch of the old Whig organization that died a natural death with the Civil war, gained strength from the old time northern democrats who voted for Lincoln or fought through the great struggle in the Union army so that the life political of the nation is not really bound up in the political parties of today.

But to make a brief resume of the national elections since this nation was founded the following list of tabulated figures have been put together in such a way as they can be readily understood. The first named candidate in each case was the successful one except in the Tilden-Hayes contest when Hayes was declared elected. The following is the table:

1789. Previous to 1804 each elector voted for two candidates for president. The one receiving the largest number of votes was declared president and the one receiving the next largest number was declared vice-president. 1912. Dream Yourself to Sleep.

When you retire to bed, go there to sleep. And sleep. Don't think, don't plan, don't worry. Shut the door firmly upon all thinking. Open the mind to fancies, never mind how vague and fantastic, if they are but pleasing; and let yourself drift about in this sea of fancies until sleep comes—you know not when. So by acquiring the power of dreaming while awake you gain the ability of dreaming yourself into sleep.

Today's Riddle

A Model Servant.
Miss Ann Annell of Weybridge, Surrey, who recently died at the age of 87 years, was an example of long and faithful domestic service. Throughout her whole lifetime she had only one "place." At the age of 16 she entered the service of the family of the late Sir Prescott Hewett, and she remained in the same family, as nurse and faithful friend, for 71 years.

Helped To Keep Down Expenses.
Mrs. J. E. Henry, Akron, Mich., tells how she did so. "I was bothered with my kidneys and had to go nearly double. I tried a sample of Foley Kidney Pills and they did me so much good that I bought a bottle and they saved me a big doctor's bill." For weak back, backache, rheumatism, urinary and kidney troubles, use Foley Kidney Pills. They help quickly. Badger Drug Co.

Wise Philosophy.
Do not let your head run upon that which is none of your own, but pick out some of the best of your circumstances, and consider how eagerly you would wish for them, were they not in your possession.—Marcus Aurelius

Adam's Luck.
Adam never had to listen to people who remembered how cold it was, and how long the snow lasted in winters that he had forgotten.

A Good Investment.
There is no better investment than a fifty cent piece in a bottle of Meritol White Liniment. Muscular and rheumatic pains, swellings, lameness and soreness of the muscles are promptly relieved. Meritol White Liniment is especially recommended as a general pain killer of unusual merit. Reliable Drug Co.

ONLY POSSIBLE REASON.

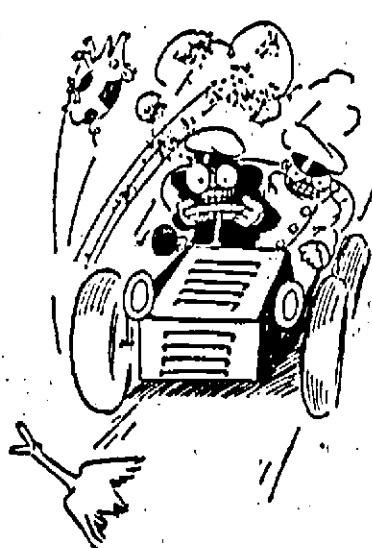

"Clara is going without a new spring hat this year."
"For what reason?"
"Because she has to."

NATURALLY

DeQuitz—Windy was a barker in a circus once, wasn't he?
De Whiz—Yes.
De Quitz—When did he give up this line of continuous talk?
De Whiz—When he married.

AN HEIRESS LOST

Howell—Like your automobile cost you much?
Powell—About fifty thousand dollars.
Howell—What do you mean?
Powell—I was engaged to a girl who was worth that amount and I took her for a ride, and the blamed thing broke down, and she had to walk five miles and the next day she sent me a letter breaking the engagement.

UNCLE WALT
The Poet Philosopher

Copyright, 1909, by George Matthew Adams

BY WALT MASON

Because of the chiggers those blamed little diggers, no more dare I bask in the green woodland pool, no more draw a measure of sweet wholesome pleasure from seeking the groves with a loaf and a book! A man can give battle to serpents that rattle, to all the wild creatures infesting the woods; but chiggers defy him; as soon as they spy him

CHIGGERS they camp on his frame and deliver the goods. With swatters and beaters he fights off the skeeters, with sundage fires he baffles their cousins and aunts; the chiggers birl senseless his futile defenses and calmly crawl under the log of his pants. A man on the beach'll meet potent or weak and come out the victor if given a show; the coon and the possum—he's able to boss 'em 'til he's whip seven owls if they stood in a row; but ah, what a figure he cuts when the chigger gets into his system, a-thrilling for oil; he gets on his knees and his yells bust his veins and knees and his yells bust and bites chunks from the roll. The woods are deserted where erstwhile we flirted with Susan Miranda and Collier nice maid; the tall poplars wonder why no one sits under—the chiggers have driven the boys from their shade!

A GREAT SCHEME

Oldwad—Let's celebrate our golden wedding next week.
Mrs. Oldwad—But we've only been married twenty years.
Oldwad—I know, but we need the gold.

Tobacco in the Orient.

The use of tobacco is universal in the Orient. The word choroot comes from Madras. The first cigars seen by Columbus in the New World were wrapped with corn shucks.

QUICK RETURNS.

Our neighbor killed his Thomas Cat. Next week he advertised for one. For reasons all his own. And after he got replies, The old cat turned up home again. It pays to advertise.

Costumes Indicated Conditions. Peasant girls in parts of Europe declare their unmarried condition by modes of dress and culture, and hach-clors are sometimes indicated in similar fashion. The zane br girls had its significance in the Greek world, and the Roman husband wore as such garb of his own.

Making the Home.

A house is no home unless it contains food and fire for the mind as well as for the body.—Margaret Fuller.

New Zealand's Timber Supply. On a steady consumption of 400,000,000 feet a year it is estimated that New Zealand's timber supply will give out in fifty years.

Move On Now!

says a policeman to a great crowd, and whacks heads if it don't "Move on now," says the big, harsh mineral pills to bowel congestion and suffering follows. Dr. Kitch's New Life Pills don't bulldoze the bowels. They gently persuade them to right action, and health follows. 25c at People's Drug Co.

PUBLIC IS ASKED TO AID IN THE MATTER

Persons Answering Fraudulent Advertisements Asked to Notify Gazette. The Gazette is desirous of keeping out of its columns fraudulent advertising and asks the assistance of its patrons to this end. There are many number of con-men in the country who make a living through a nicely worded advertisement, offering golden opportunities, and these unscrupulous people find fertile ground for work among the masses. Many orders are received in the Gazette mail for advertising which are returned as objectionable and where there is a question as to the qualifications the advertisement is omitted. All newspapers have this experience. But even with the utmost care there will be an occasional advertisement which will pass the scrutiny of the business department of the paper and find its way into the columns. The Gazette will deem it a favor if you will report to the office any trouble which may have been experienced through the answering of such an advertisement.

Now comes further evidence.
The testimony is confirmed.
The remedy was tested—the cure lasted.

Could Janesville residents de-

It's Janesville testimony. It can be investigated.

C. E. Lester, 1017 Wheeler street, Janesville, Wis., says: "For several months I was in poor health, and my system seemed to be filled with uric poison. My back ached intensely and I had but little strength or energy. I decided to try a good kidney medicine, and as I had often heard Doan's Kidney Pills highly spoken of, I got a supply at the People's Drug Co. It did not take this remedy long to bring me entire relief. At that time I publicly told of my experience and during the years that have since passed,
I have not changed my high opinion of

The Three Guardsmen

... By ...

ALEXANDRE DUMAS

"Wait here ten minutes," said M. de Treville, "and if at the expiration of ten minutes you do not see me come out return to my house, for it will be useless for you to wait for me longer."

The four young men waited ten minutes, a quarter of an hour, twenty minutes, and, seeing that M. de Treville did not return, went away very uneasy as to what was going to happen.

M. de Treville entered the king's closet boldly and found his majesty, in a very ill humor, seated on and beating his boot with the handle of his whip, which, however, did not prevent his making, with the greatest coolness, after his majesty's health.

"Had, monsieur, had I grow weary," "How? Your majesty is becoming dull. Have you not enjoyed the pleasures of the chase today?"

"A fine pleasure, indeed," monsieur! We started a stag of ten tuns. We chased him for six hours, and when he was near being taken—when St. Simon was already putting his horn to his mouth to sound the halloo—crack! all the pack takes the wrong scent and sets off after a two tuns. And there is M. le Cardinal always at hand, who does not leave me a moment's repose who talks to me perpetually about Spain, about Austria, about England, Ah! Apropos of M. le Cardinal, M. de Treville, I am vexed with you."

"And in what have I been so unfortunate as to displease your majesty?" asked M. de Treville, feeling the most profound astonishment.

"Is it for this I name you captain of my musketeers that they should assassinate a man and disturb a whole quarter without your saying a word? But yet, without doubt, my haste necesses you wrongfully; without doubt the rioters are in prison and you come to tell me justice is done."

"Sir," replied M. de Treville calmly, "I come to demand it of you."

"And against whom, pray?" cried the king.

"Against calculators," said M. de Treville.

"Ah, this is something new!" replied the king. "Will you tell me that you three musketeers, Athos, Porthos and Aramis, and your cadet from Normandy have not fallen, like so many furies, upon poor Bernajoux and have not maltreated him in such a fashion that probably by this time he is dead? Will you tell me that they did not lay siege to the hotel of the Duc de la Tremouille? Tell me, now—can you deny all this?"

"And who has told you this fine story, sir?" asked De Treville quietly.

"I speak of the prop of the state—of my only servant—of my only friend—of M. le Cardinal."

"His eminence has hastily accused your majesty's musketeers, toward whom he is unjust."

"The accusation comes from M. de la Tremouille, from the duke himself. What do you answer to that?"

"I refer the matter to him, but upon one condition, sire."

"What is that?"

"It is that your majesty will make him come here, will interrogate him yourself without witnesses and that I shall see your majesty as soon as you have seen the duke."

"What then? And you will be bound," cried the king, "by what M. de la Tremouille shall say?"

When arrived at the bottom of the back stairs he desired them to wait. If the king was still irritated against them they would depart without being seen.

On arriving at the king's private antechamber M. de Treville found La Chénay, who informed him that they had not been able to find M. de la Tremouille on the preceding evening at his hotel, that he came in too late to present himself at the Louvre, and that he had only that moment arrived and that he was then with the king.

This circumstance pleased M. de Treville much, as he thus became certain that no foreign suggestion could influence itself between M. de la Tremouille's deposition and himself.

In fact ten minutes had scarcely passed away when the door of the king's closet opened and M. de Treville saw M. de la Tremouille come out. The duke came straight up to him and said:

"M. de Treville, his majesty has just sent for me in order to inquire respecting the circumstances which took place yesterday at my hotel. I have told him the truth—that is to say, that the fault lay with my people and that I was ready to offer you my excuses."

"That's well said," said the king, who had heard all these compliments through the open door, "only tell him, Treville, since he wishes to be considered as your friend, that I also wish to be one of his. Where are your musketeers? I told you the day before yesterday to bring them with you."

"Why have you not done so?"

"They are below, sire, and with your permission La Chénay will tell them to come up."

"Yes, yes; let them come up immediately. It is nearly 8 o'clock, and at 9 I expect a visit. Go, monsieur le duc, and return often. Come in, Treville."

The duke bowed and retired. At the moment he opened the door the three musketeers and D'Artagnan, conducted by La Chénay, appeared at the top of the staircase.

"Come in, my braves," said the king; "come in. I am going to scold you."

The musketeers advanced, bowing. D'Artagnan following closely behind them.

"What," continued the king—"seven of his eminence's guards placed here do count by you four in two days! That's too many, gentlemen—too many!"

"Therefore, sire, your majesty sees that they are quite contrite and repentant to offer you their excuses."

"Quite contrite and repentant, hem!" said the king. "There is one yonder of a Gascon look. Come hither, monsieur."

D'Artagnan approached, assuming a most deprecating air.

"Why, you told me he was a young man. This is a boy, Treville; a mere boy! Do you mean to say that it was he who bestowed that severe thrust upon Jussac and those two equally fine thrusts upon Bernajoux? Why, this Bernajoux is a very devil! M. de Treville, Gascons are always poor, are they not? La Chénay, go and see if by rummaging all my pockets you can find forty pistoles, and if you can find them bring them to me. And now let us see, young man, with your hand upon your conscience how did all this come to pass?"

D'Artagnan related the adventure of the preceding day in all its details.

"Yes," murmured the king, "this is just the account the duke gave me of the affair. Poor cardinal! Seven men in two days, and those of his very best! But that's quite enough, gentlemen. Please to understand that's enough."

The king took a handful of gold from La Chénay and put it into the hand of D'Artagnan.

At that period the ideas of pride which were in fashion in our days did not yet prevail. D'Artagnan put his forty pistoles into his pocket without any scruple—on the contrary, thanking his majesty greatly.

"There," said the king, looking at a clock, "there now, as it is half past 8 you may retire, for, as I told you, I expect some one at 9. Thanks for your devotedness, gentlemen. I may continue to rely upon it, may I not?"

"Oh, sire," cried the four companions with one voice, "you may!"

"Well, well, but keep whole. That will be better, and you will be more useful to me. Treville," added the king in a low voice as the others were retiring, "as you have no room in the musketeers, place this young man in the company of the guards of M. Dessart, your brother-in-law."

And the king waved his hand to Treville, who left him and rejoined the musketeers, whom he found sharing the forty pistoles with D'Artagnan.

from the king's play table, which did not prevent the king from being as complacent to him as possible or whenever he met him from asking in the kindest tone:

"Well, monsieur le cardinal, how fares it with that poor Jussac and that poor Bernajoux of yours?"

CHAPTER VI.

The Interior of "The Musketeers."

WHEN D'Artagnan was out of the Louvre and consulted his friends Athos advised him to order a good repast at the Pommery de Min, Porthos told him to engage a lackey and Aramis advised him to provide himself with a suitable instinct.

The repast was carried into effect; that very day, and the lackey waited at table. The repast had been ordered by Athos and the lackey furnished by Porthos. He was a Picard named Planchet, whom the glorious musketeer had picked up on the bridge de la Tourneffe, making his rounds and spitting in the water. The servant of Porthos was named Mousqueton.

Athos, on his part, had a valet whom he had trained in his service in a perfectly peculiar fashion and who was named Grimaud. He was very taciturn, was Athos. During the five or six years that he had lived in the strictest intimacy with his companions, Porthos and Aramis, they could remember having often seen him smile, but had never heard him laugh. His words were brief and expressive.

Although Athos was scarcely thirty years old and was of great personal beauty, intelligence of mind and noble bearing, no one knew that he had ever had a mistress. He never spoke of woman. His reserve, his roughness and his silence made almost an old man of him. It had then, in order not to disturb his habits, accustomed Grimaud to obey him upon a single gesture or upon the mere movement of his lips. He never spoke to him but upon most extraordinary occasions.

Porthos, as we have seen, was of a character exactly opposite to that of Athos. He not only talked much, but he talked loudly and filled the ante-chamber of M. de Treville and the guardroom of the Louvre with the accounts of his loves.

An old proverb says, "Like master, like man."

Mousqueton, the valet of Porthos, was a Norman. Porthos had doubtless for Mousqueton cut out of his old man's clothes and cast off cloaks, and thanks to a very intelligent tailor, Mousqueton made a very good figure when attending on his master.

As for Aramis, who intended to enter the church some day, his lackey was called Bazin. He was from thirty-five to forty years of age, mild, peaceable, sleek, employing the leisure his master left him in the perusal of pious works, providing rigorously for two a dinner of few dishes, but excellent. For the rest he was dumb, blind and deaf and of unimpeachable fidelity.

Athos dwelt in the Rue Peron, within two steps of the Luxembourg. His apartments consisted of two small chambers, very nicely fitted up, in a furnished house, the hostess of which, still young and still really handsome, cast tender glances uselessly at him. Some fragments of great past splendor appeared here and there upon the walls of this modest lodging.

A sword, for example, richly damascened, which belonged by its make to the times of Francis I., the hilt of which alone, incrustated with precious stones, might be worth 200 pistoles and which nevertheless in his moments of greatest distress Athos had never pledged or offered for sale.

Porthos lived in apartments large in size and of a very sumptuous appearance in the Rue du Vieux-Colombier. But he was never to be found at home, and he never invited anybody to go up with him.

With regard to D'Artagnan, we know how he was lodged, and we have already made acquaintance with his lackey, Master Planchet.

As to Aramis, he dwelt in a little lodging composed of a boudoir, an eating room and a bedroom, which room, situated, as the others were, on the ground floor, looked out upon a little fresh, green garden, shady and impenetrable to the eyes of his neighbors.

"A musketeer for a time, my friend, as the cardinal says, a musketeer against my will, but a churchman at heart, believe me. Athos and Porthos dragged me into this to occupy me. I find at the moment of being ordained a little difficulty with— But that would not interest you, and I am taking up your valuable time," said Aramis.

THE MOLLIECODDLES

By FREDERICK WALWORTH BROWN.

They needed a scapegoat and they pitched on us.

In the camp of the Molliecoddles, at the rear with the baggage-wagons, men sat silent about the fire and avoided one another's eyes. Now and then one cursed bitterly and the others would turn his way for an instant and then come back to their vacant staring. Bewildered seemed to be their attitude, utter blind bewilderment.

"We never had a chance," muttered one. "We never had a chance." Another suddenly flung down a paper he had been reading in the red light, cursed like a driver for a moment, and fell silent again.

In his tent the colonel spoke bitterly to his adjutant.

"They needed a scapegoat, and they've pitched on us," he said.

A common sentiment ran from the head of the regiment to the meanest private in the ranks. It was, moreover, a perfectly legitimate, well-founded sentiment, and the facts upon which it was based were those: The Molliecoddles were a brand-new regiment. Most of them had been clerks and small business men in a certain well-known city. Their hands were white and soft and their chests not astonishing either for length or breadth.

Therefore, because the spirit is less easily discerned than the flesh, their comrades-in-arms, veterans of two campaigns, dubbed them the Molliecoddles on their first appearance.

The regiment suffered the label with only a mild resentment. Individually, they knew they were not cowards, and they trusted confidently in the future to justify their presence in arms.

As a regiment they had not yet found themselves. They had no esprit de corps. They were a collection of units instead of the single and particular entity a regiment should be. Then came the catastrophe.

The army was facing the enemy with a river in the rear, and it so happened that the Molliecoddles held the extreme right wing. Here the general commanding made his initial mistake.

There being no natural defenses to protect this wing, it should in common prudence have been flung back to rest upon the river and thus present a line of fire in the event of a flanking movement by the enemy.

This was not done, and the Molliecoddles were left strung out in air. Not even the colonel, who had been a successful merchant, understood the perilous insecurity of their position, and the regiment calmly laid itself down to sleep that night, expecting battle on the morrow and confident of acquitting itself well, but feeling itself secure for the immediate future.

At once came a heavy column of the enemy, driving in the pickets, and itself arriving on their heels. The line of battle faced south. The attack fell from the west.

Two companies succeeded in forming a line about on the new line, and firing a round or two before they were overwhelmed. Then the regiment, after it the brigade, was rolled in, telephoned, crushed, with hardly a chance to fire a shot.

It was not their fault. The best and most seasoned regiment in the army could have done no better under the circumstances.

But when the major-general had collected the shattered remnant of his forces on the safe side of the river, he felt the need of a scapegoat, as the colonel had divined, and recognized the Molliecoddles as the logical and helpless candidates for the position.

He nominated them accordingly in his report, and the army, bitter over defeat and not at all understanding, instantly elected them unanimously, in two days the whole country knew, beyond hope of refutation, that the Molliecoddles had brought disaster on the division by conspicuous cowardice in the face of the enemy.

The Molliecoddles, battered and still dazed, reviewed the situation with a sort of savage bewilderment. Individually, they knew they were not cowards. Collectively they were inarticulate, uncertain, perplexed.

Consequently they suffered many things, though by no means with meekness. There were black eyes and broken heads in neighboring regiments, and a lively lust for blood and slaughter in the minds of the Molliecoddles.

In the meantime they were detailed to the rear to guard the baggage-train, and the cup of their humiliation overflowed. In bitter murmurings against their lot, but Fate had laid eyes upon them, and while they were yet in the mood to kick out violently at the touch of a feather, she sent them a golden opportunity.

Having hurled his opponent back across the river, the enemy proceeded to take the offensive. By a rapid march in the night, a long column crossed the river some miles above, skirting by a wide detour to fall suddenly and unexpectedly upon the rear of the demoralized forces.

So silently and swiftly was this maneuver accomplished that no word of it reached the rival general till his communications had been cut and a frightened crowd of teamsters and camp-followers came streaming up the road.

Closed on their heels appeared the van of the eager enemy. In their way stood only the despoiled and rejected Molliecoddles.

At the first sign of trouble the colonel of the regiment deployed his men across the road and prepared to hold that line "till the cows come home."

A stone fence afforded excellent protection, and the Molliecoddles spread themselves along this breast-work with the hot blood humming in their veins. Cowards, eh?

They would show what sort of cowards they were. They ceased that moment to be a collection of units, and were in a way to become a regiment.

They were madmen, most of them, ready to go red-eyed and homicidal at a pin-prick. They had been goaded and buffeted with no chance to reply. They had read ironical newspaper comments by men who had never smelled powder till their nerves were strung like hair-triggers.

Almost to a man, they yearned for slaughter with the primitive thirst of savagery. They wanted to get square. They wanted to clear themselves. They wanted to show up their critics for the blatant liars they were.

Across a field in front of them came a line of hurrying men, followed by another and another. They were overlapped on either flank. What matter? An aide galloped up to the colonel.

"Hold them for twenty minutes!" was his cry, almost despairing. "Hold them if you lose every man."

"I'll hold 'em," said the colonel grimly.

He knew the temper of his men. It was identical with his own. Directly a battery whirled up and unlimbered in the road. That would help. The staff officer had gone to hurry up the support. The colonel stalked along his line.

Across the open ground in front the enemy neared rapidly. They came almost recklessly, expecting little opposition. The only task they saw before them was to drive their foe into the river.

They made for the stone wall with a yell. At sight of the guns in the road

a shout of triumph broke out. These should be the first fruits of their victory. The colonel, crouching now behind the wall, surveyed them, coming, only his head projecting above the coping.

The impatient privates fingered their weapons and cursed beneath their breath. Would they never get the word to fire? Were they to be run over again and trampled on without a chance?

A hundred yards away a compact line of men was toiling up the slope. In the road a column swung forward full in the face of the silent guns. Then when men's nerves were fairly snapping with the tension, the colonel gave the word.

The front of the stone wall burst into flame, and above the rattle of musketry came the bursting roar of the guns in the road, as the gunners leaped from concealment. Out on the grassy slope the first line of hurrying, eager men melted into shapeless masses on the ground.

In the road the grape and canister tore great holes in the compact column. The surprised were surprised. The front ranks recoiled, shattered out of all semblance to formation.

But the attack was delayed for only a moment. Behind that foremost rank was another which came steadily on, leaving a man now and then sprawling out or writhing in the grass, but driving straight forward notwithstanding. Down the line behind the stone wall went the command, "Come firing."

It almost caused a mutiny, but the officers persuaded the madmen to obey. The enemy came on with a yell then. Evidently it was but an insignificant force in their front. They were minded to run over them.

Yelling like fiends, they rushed across the open. It was Dunker Hill repeated. Again the colonel let them come within a hundred yards before he gave the command to fire, and again when the order came and the sheet of flame burst forth the advancing line withered as before the breath from a blazing blast-furnace.

Flesh and blood could not face it. They were men who would go unflinchingly where there was one chance of coming through.

Here there was none. It was death, bald and certain. Those who could recoiled down the slope. Many stayed silent in the grass.

Meanwhile the carnage in the road was fearful. The steady plying of the guns loaded with grape and canister had piled the advancing column in a mass of dead and dying till the order came to halt and deploy across the adjoining field.

This added to the labors of the devoted Molliecoddles. The next advance was in skilful formation and far more difficult to stop.

Men began to fall behind the breast-work. Bullets sang over their heads and spat viciously into the wall in front of them.

But fifteen of the needed twenty minutes had elapsed. If they could hang on for five more.

They were firing at will now. The volleys had ceased, but there was a steady, continuous rattle of musketry. The colonel walked back and forth behind his line, fiercely chiding his musketeers, pausing to glance at the cloud of skirmishers coming steadily on, or noting with a grin that his left was overlapped for a quarter of a mile and must speedily be turned.

It could not be helped. He was holding what he could, but his line was woefully thin and every moment becoming thinner. The singing bullets took a steady toll.

Down the slope before the stone wall a mass of men pressed forward yelling. The thin line behind the wall concentrated all its fire upon them, but it no longer availed. On they came, dogged, determined.

Men dropped steadily, but still they came on. The twenty minutes were up. Where were the reinforcements?

The colonel glanced about. Woods behind him shut out all view of the regiments and brigades hurrying breakneck to the rear that had become the front.

All he knew was that he was alone, protecting the army from overwhelming defeat. Cowards, were they?

Even in that red, fiery moment he had time for an instant of bitter pride and exultation as he viewed his dead behind the stone wall.

The rushing mass in front was close up now. He knew he could not stop them. He lacked the men. He had held them back for more than the time demanded of him.

Should he order his men to fall back? The regiment had done its work. More could not reasonably be asked of them.

They were outflanked on either hand, and about to be overwhelmed. Should he order them back?

There came to him another thought. "They called us cowards," and with that he hurried along the line with the command, "Fix bayonets."

He would stay there and meet them, if it cost him every man. "They called us cowards, boys," he shouted. "This is our chance."

On came that yelling wave in front. Loading and firing as fast as they could, the remnant of the regiment could not stop it. But not a man behind the stone wall flinched before the inevitable onslaught that up to that moment had long since sought the rear. Those who stayed would stay to the end.

They were lamentably few, but those few were bad men to face. At their colonel's call they rose, gripping their weapons, whole men, men with bleeding heads, men with limp arms, men who rose only to fall again and again struggle to rise.

With a yell the wave broke over the stone wall, and in an instant the Molliecoddles were overwhelmed. Fighting like demons, madmen, or heroes, they went down before superior numbers, but not before they had taken full toll for their defeat.

Through his glasses the general in command saw their heroic stand. The regiments, breaking from the woods behind saw it and burst into cheers. A sudden wave of firing broke out on either flank, and then the conquering enemy reeled before the charge of the advancing regiments.

A moment of fighting hand to hand, bayonet to bayonet, and then the fresh troops dropped behind the stone wall and poured a galling fire into the retreating foe. The day was won, the army was saved, and it was the Molliecoddles who had done it.

In the camp of the Molliecoddles that evening men sat weary and dejected about the fires. Their attitude seemed much the same as on that other evening. There were gaps in every group, and men's voices were low and awestricken.

They discussed their casualties with an appearance of weariness. "Tucker's gone, eh?" "Billy Aken got it in the head." "They've took off Morton's leg," and so forth.

"How's the Old Man to-night?" asked one. "Heard anything?"

"They say he's doing well. If he pulls through, I reckon they'll make him a brigadier."

"Too bad they got him. He hadn't ought to have stood up."

"Well, anyway, we held 'em."

That was the finale always. No matter what had come to pass, no matter who had died, or who was wounded, or who was missing, "Well, we held 'em."

A battery came past, the trace-chains rattling, the wheels clanking in the ruts.

"What regiment is that?" called an officer.

"The Molliecoddles," came the defiant answer.

"Oh!" said the officer, and the battery moved on.

But every gunner's eyes turned suddenly toward the camp-fires, and the Molliecoddles returned the gaze with erect heads. It was as though they asked, "If it wasn't for us, where would you be?"

And from the faces of the gunners one understood that they had no adequate answer.

The Hope of It.

As to Stage Fright.
"Stage-fright" is surely among the most mysterious of sudden seizures. It begins when the actor or speaker thinks "they are not interested in me." It ends when he determines "I will terrorize them."

PURE SWEET MILK

PASTEURIZED

Every growing and thriving business has its reasons for being successful. Invariably these reasons are founded upon the merits of the product sold, and a sincere interest in the patrons and public at large.

The Janesville Pure Milk Co. is building and growing on just such a foundation, and there is a great future ahead. Already more than 50 per cent of Janesville's homes are supplied with our Pasteurized milk, and there is every provision made for increasing patronage.

Cleanliness in Handling

Of our milk is on the same standard that is used by all milk dealers handling the best class trade in this country. If we didn't closely follow this policy, our large patronage among the families of Janesville that appreciate purity and quality in milk, would not be increasing.

In the first place, all our milk comes from well kept healthy herds of milk producing cows. Cows of this class must necessarily be of good breeds and kept in perfect healthy condition, or we will not accept the milk under any consideration. When the milk is delivered at our station in the morning, it is strained and run through the Pasteurizer. After going through the pasteurizing process, which removes and destroys all harmful germs, which raw milk usually contains, it is run into the bottling machine where a dozen bottles are filled at a time, and immediately sealed without the slightest possibility of anything but the clean pure milk getting into them.

Cleanliness in Delivery

Everybody in the city knows our milk wagons at a distance. They bespeak, by their clean, painted, fresh appearance, the nature of the purity and quality of the milk they carry.

You can judge the character of a man by his outward appearance. Just so can you judge the character and worthiness of our milk by the appearance and condition of our wagons.

The next time you see one of these wagons, stop the man, get a bottle of our Pasteurized milk and try it; if you have never used it before. We know it will please you. If you do not care to stop the wagon, just phone us an order tonight, you will get it in the morning.
